A new lease of life...

Yogesh Kumar, 47, works in a cardboard factory in Aligarh earning around Rs 60,000 annually with which he runs his family of three – a wife and a 12 year old son.

In February this year, he started complaining of constant cough for which he took some syrups. When his cough became worse, his doctor advised him an x-ray investigation which revealed few lumps in the lungs indicating possibilities of lung cancer. His condition was getting worse and he had to be admitted to the hospital. He was then referred to AIIMS where the investigations took months. During this time, his health started deteriorating as he was not getting proper medication.

Meanwhile, he was not able to work and the financial position of his family got worse. The extended family was taking care of daily needs of his wife and son but the treatment was getting beyond his reach.

He again went to see the doctor in Government Hospital in Aligarh who advised him a PET scan. The test further confirmed lung cancer and he was referred to Ganga Ram Hospital, New Delhi from where he was further asked to consult Dr. Pramod K Julka at Max Institute of Cancer Care.

Dr Julka immediately started the treatment and educated Yogesh and his family properly on the disease. While Yogesh managed to get some financial help from his relatives and friends, it was not sufficient for the treatment. Max India Foundation was approached and pitched in to fund his rest of the treatment. Yogesh has undergone a lot of pain and struggle, but after undergoing five cycles of chemo and two weeks of radiation, he is now much better.
